Outlook Disclaimer Manager has been thought with corporations in mind. In this way it is easy to distribute the clients throughout the entire company, no matter if there are 50 or 5000 employees who will use the Outlook Disclaimer Client.

The Outlook Disclaimer Manager main window

Outlook Disclaimer Manager consists of two main parts, the Disclaimer title area (fig 1.a) and the Disclaimer text area (fig 1.b).

The Disclaimer Title Area are managed by 3 buttons, whose function is to Create, Rename and Delete a Disclaimer. Disclaimers are listed in alphabetical order below each other in this field as well.

New Disclaimer

The button “New Disclaimer” will create a new Disclaimer template, click on the button and a new window will be shown asking for a name for the new Disclaimer.

Rename Disclaimer

Any Disclaimer that is made can be renamed again. The only that can't be renamed is the disclaimer named "Default", this is a system Disclaimer. It is possible to edit the Disclaimer text for the default disclaimer.

Delete Disclaimer

Any Disclaimer that has been created by a Disclaimer Manager can be deleted again. The only Disclaimer that can't be deleted is the system Disclaimer called "Default".

If a Disclaimer have been set to as the default Disclaimer (not the system disclaimer), then it is not possible to delete that either. To delete the default disclaimer, go to Options and change that to another before you try to delete it.

The Disclaimer Text area has two buttons that is important to notice. First there is the Save Disclaimer and secondly there is the Import Disclaimer button.

Save Disclaimer

Will save the text, both locally and update the template online. This means that the text you just saved will be available immediately for all users who use this Disclaimer as their default. Based out from synchronization schedule this can take up to an hour to update on client side.

Import Disclaimer Text

This will open a dialogue box and you will be able to search for local documents in the odf format. This is a special Outlook Disclaimer File format. But plain text files can be imported as well.

Disclaimer Text Area

The text area for version 1.0.0.0 is a plain text area, this will be updated to a rich text where you can change colours, fonts and more from version 1.2.0.0 and will be available Q2, 2010.

You can insert, or write any type of text you wish there are to be distributed with the template. Do know that this is to be formatted in non HTML styles.

For companies who are running within an Active Directory enabled site, it is also possible to use the following fields from end-users profile:

Username

Fullname

Displayname

More Active Directory fields will be added in a near future.

Additionally is it possible to insert Time, Date as well as timezone into the text. This will be updated with the computer time at the time the message is send.

Cut, Past, Copy and Delete functions are available as well as standard features for the text editing area.

Top Menu Buttons

There are 3 top menu buttons, Synchronize, Edit/View Disclaimer Rights and Options.

Synchronize

Will update all local content from the online store, this is useable in case the application have been open for a longer period of time and the administrator need to have updated the most recent user content – for him to work on. This is namely user accounts and computer accounts that only will be available after the users have had their accounts registered, or the administrator have synchronized Outlook Disclaimer Manager with their local Active Directory – This can be done with the Active Directory Synch tool that can be found on the website

Options

On the options page there are 2 important areas to set.

Disclaimer Activation

This is based on if users is to the recognised by the computer they have logged on to, or by what username they are using. If company users have their own login via Active Directory, then it is advisable to use the Username settings and manage Disclaimers by Username. If companies are not using an Active Directory, then the system administrator should determine if users are best identified by the computer name they use, or by the log in name they are working on daily.

Do notice that Disclaimer defaults will not be the same between user and computer accounts, as they are not linked together. Changing this can become a time consuming administrative task to update all rights to reflect the new settings if there are many user/computer accounts.

For Microsoft Exchange users this feature is void and administrators have to use the Exchange Disclaimer Manager tool to manage user accounts instead.

Default Disclaimers

On the Default Disclaimer area, administrators should determine what Disclaimer template users should use the first time their account is registered in the system. "Default" is the standard setting, but can be set to any Disclaimer that has been created.

Do know that changes occur instantly and all new accounts will be using the Disclaimer text from that point on. So make sure that you have created the Disclaimer text before you change it to a new disclaimer.

Edit/View Disclaimer Rights

The Disclaimer Rights window is where you set the individual disclaimers to each account.

Depending on the options settings, this page will either show the Computer accounts rights or the User accounts disclaimer rights.

To set a Disclaimer, click on the drop down list out from the computer/user account you wish to change and select the Disclaimer Template you wish to assign. The changes are updated instantly and user will get the updated template after the outlook client have been restarted or synchronized.

The account will be updated and inserted if the Outlook Client is still running, so make sure to uninstall the Disclaimer Client before you delete the account from the system.
